Ineligibility

The Civil Society Leadership Award does not support:

- Dependent family members;
- Those currently enrolled in an international Master's degree program with support from a scholarship or fellowship; and
- Employees involved in the administration of the Civil Society Leadership Award or their family members.

CSLA Host Universities

CSLA partners with universities worldwide to host grantees for 1- and 2-year master's level programs.

Finalists are matched with universities according to their chosen area of specialization, academic profile, and professional aspirations. Final decisions concerning host university placement are made by the program selection committee, which includes university admissions staff and faculty. CSLA and university staff will be in touch with successful candidates to communicate any additional university admission procedures that need to be completed.

For a full list of our current host universities in Europe, the UK, the US and some parts of Asia, and the specific programs that were available in 2017, please review our Host University Guide on our website.

Selection Process

Competition for the Civil Society Leadership Awards is open and merit-based. Selection is based on an applicant's fit with the program's objectives as well as the graduate admissions criteria of the participating universities. Academic excellence, professional aptitude, leadership potential in the field of specialization, proven commitment to open society values, and appropriate language proficiency are all important factors in evaluation.

All eligible applicants will be reviewed by an international selection committee. The proposed field of study should be logical for the goals expressed, and the application itself should be organized and complete.

Compelling candidates will be interviewed by a selection committee comprised of university representatives, CSLA staff, and partner organization representatives, such as the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD).
